U of A in Canadian context

Our program

- Is young
- Is large
- Focuses on disciplinary writing
- Exists in the context of 18 faculties, many with a professional focus
- Coordinates with 4 writing centres at three campuses

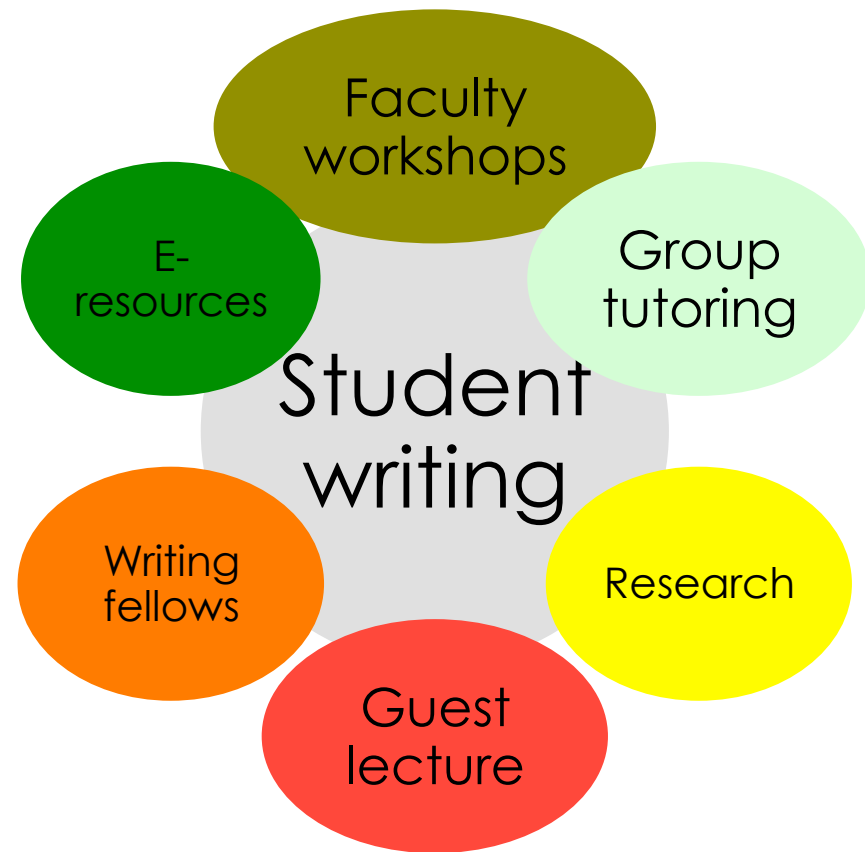

U of A Goals for WAC

- Fit programs to curriculums: one size does not fit all programs of study at all levels and campuses
- Focus on a genre approach to WID: disciplinary writing contexts, genres, cultures through research
- Move expertise about writing into the disciplinary curriculum, directly (lectures) or indirectly (web resources)
- Conduct research to determine the needs of student writers: what are they asked to write?

U of A: Strategies

1. Faculty workshops that help instructors to create contexts that support students
2. Guest lectures by the WAC director to help students as they begin to work on writing assignments
3. Group workshops in disciplinary courses
4. Research into writing assignments
5. WAC Undergraduate teaching fellows at Augustana campus
6. Facebook; wacmail@mailman.srv.ualberta.ca ; e-resources

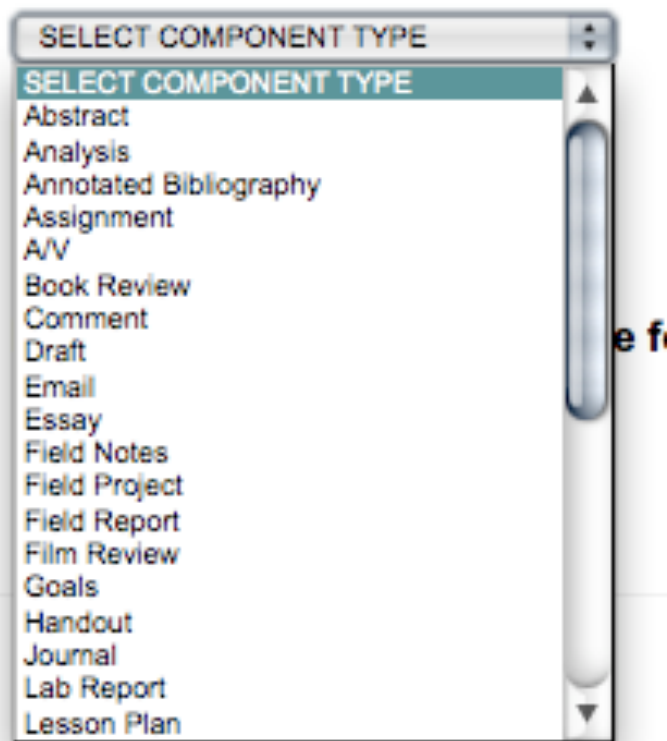

Guest lectures: WAC as Consultancy

- We attempt to build ongoing relationships with instructors, with curricular units, and with students to ensure that we learn as much as we can about how students in a particular discipline write.
- 2010-2011: 33 lectures on a variety of writing assignments
- Focus on clarifying the assignment, idea-generation, and writing strategies
- C. Schryer (1994). "A Consultancy Model of Research," in Contextual Literacy: WAC. Winnipeg: Inkshed Publications.
- J. Jablonski (2006). Academic Writing Consulting and WAC. Cresskill, NJ: Hampton Press.

As Director of Writing Across the Curriculum, I work with faculty and students across the university to improve student writing. I consult with instructors and departments, and I teach writing in a wide variety of courses--everything from Animal Science to Religious Studies--when students in those courses are starting a writing assignment.

I am the author, co-author, or editor of eight books and 20 articles, including Writing Instruction in Canadian Universities. My current research interests include writing assignments across disciplinary fields and rhetorical approaches to text encoding. The SSHRC-funded research project on writing assignments across the curriculum extends our work at the University of Alberta across Canada.

Currently I serve as co-President of the Canadian Association for the Study of Discourse and Writing \(CASDW\), the Executive Committee of the

What can we do for individual instructors:

- meet to talk about ways to incorporate informal (short, impromptu) writing assignments into any class, small or large
- review via email any assignment you give students that has a writing component to help make it clearer for students and to help develop grading rubrics to improve the speed and accuracy of grading
- visit your class to help students get started on your writing assignments

What can we do for departments:

- hold workshops on creating good writing assignments
- host discussions of how to improve the writing of students in your programs
- conduct reviews of writing assignments in your departments courses to identify exactly what your students are being asked to write—and to ensure that they have access to resources on how to write (online and on-campus)
